Course title: Media Politics: Structures and Case-Studies in Germany and Europe

Course number: FU-BEST 22

Language of instruction: English

Contact hours: 45

ECTS-Credits: 5 U.S. semester credits: 3

Course description

This course introduces its participants to mass media systems and structures in Germany and Europe and provides them with the analytical tools and background knowledge to assess the ways in which the mass media and politics interact and thus shape each other.

We will start with an overview of the different structures of mass media (public/ private) in Germany and selected European countries, including how they have historically developed and particularly which political ideas have shaped the frameworks in which media institutions and individuals operate. At the same time, we will take a critical look at how the media in turn have shaped and are still shaping the ways in which the political process works and presents itself to the public. Historical and current case-studies will help us analyse the manifold points of interaction between media and politics. At the end of the course, students will also have the opportunity to compare European and American media politics and to ask whether there may be trends and influences across the Atlantic (one or both ways) that are shaping today's politics and mass media on both sides.

Course schedule

Sessions	Topics, Readings, etc.
Session 1	Topic: Introduction: Media Politics – Media and Politics; Key Players and Keywords; Course Schedule and Expectations In this introductory session, we will familiarize ourselves with concepts and keywords that will play a dominant role in the weeks to come. What is meant by “media” in the context of this course? What kinds of “media politics” are there – is it the sum of policies that determine how media can work, or the state of politics (i.e., media-driven) nowadays? Who is “the media”? And what is expected of you as participant throughout the course? Reading: Street, John (2011): Mass media, politics and democracy. 2nd ed. Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire, New York: Palgrave Macmillan, pp. 1-17.
Session 2	Topic: Topic: From a totalitarian state to democracy: restructuring the media-system after Nazism To understand media politics in Germany, we will have to know media history – and vice versa. This is why in this session we will first look at media and politics in Nazi Germany, especially at the NS-propaganda system and how their specific structures came about after the Second World War. In the second part we will learn about the consequences for the post 1945 media system and the reconstruction of the press market.

Session 3	Topic: Media Structures in Germany today This session deals with the structures of the German media system as it is today. First, we will have a closer look at the Press and newspaper market, its market structures, challenges and consequences for the public sphere and democracy. Then, we will have a closer look at the peculiarities of the German media system (e.g., the so-called “Dual System” of public and private broadcasting) and their political

FU/BEST Program

	So far, we have looked at theoretical, historical, political and structural aspects of the German media system. In this session, we will gain knowledge about the economic realities of media companies and the working situation, professional training and self-understanding of journalists. In order to complete the picture of how the media work, we will then turn to the legal frameworks in which media institutions and individuals operate and ask to which ethical guidelines they (should) adhere. One set of questions to be asked is: How political can the media be, and how free from politics can they act? Reading: Des Freedman (2008): The politics of media policy. 1st ed. Session 7	Topic: Methods and Tools for the Analysis of Media Politics. One aim of this course has been to equip its participants with knowledge and helpful tools that will enable them to analyse media politics outside of this course, too. In order to learn about how to use them, in this session we will discuss how to use and compare specific concepts and theories on Media Effects and Media Politics. In addition, we will have a colloquium discussing the specific paper outline topics. Reading: Krappinen, Kari; Hallvard, Moe (2012): What we talk about When We Talk about Document Analysis. Session 8	Topic: Freedom of the press and political interference With our newly-gained background on structures and activity frames of German media and media politics, we will start delving into specific issues at their points of interaction. Therefore, we will dedicate this session to a critical analysis of one of the touchiest subjects between politics and the media: the clash between freedom of the press/freedom of speech and political interference on behalf of certain interest groups. A first case study will help us to enlighten this

Session 10	Topic: Media and Political Actors. Media Celebrities in Politics and Politicians as Media Celebrities Another field of interaction between politics and the media is the growing presence of the media in political campaigns. Do politicians use the media to their ends, or do the media provide ruthless insights into the candidates’ true beliefs and motivations? What does it mean when political candidates not only need to be telegenic, but also well-versed in media use and manipulation these days? In this context, our fourth case study deals with the US elections in 2016 and how media coverage has been used and misused as a tool for impinging voters’ opinion. Reading: Street, John (2011): Mass media, politics and democracy. 2nd ed. Blogs and Cyber Activism as challenges to journalism and politics. This session will take a look at new forms of information providers and its influence on journalism and politics. Do they strive for the same goals or for opposite ones? Is theirs a give-and-take situation or a tug-of-war? Do they critically control each other or secretly manipulate one another?
