The Berlin Program for Advanced German and European Studies offers up to one year of research support at the Freie Universität Berlin—one of Germany’s leading research universities. It is open to scholars in all social science and humanities disciplines, including historians working on German and European history since the mid-18th century.

Under the umbrella of our program, we offer five different fellowships to scholars from North America, Africa and China: the Berlin Program Dissertation Fellowship, the Berlin Program Postdoc Fellowship, the Max Kade Berlin Postdoctoral Fellowship, the Kerstin Leitner Berlin Dissertation Fellowship and—starting this fall—the Kerstin Leitner Berlin Postdoctoral Fellowship. For key features of our awards, check our Fellowships Overview.

The program offers a stimulating academic environment that combines excellent research opportunities with intellectual and cultural interaction. With its four universities, 60 research institutes and numerous state and national archives, Berlin is one of the most diverse and prolific centers of higher education and research in Europe.

Our research colloquium—which is run in German—serves as a central meeting point for all fellows to share, discuss and support each other’s work. Guided by eminent scholars each semester, the colloquium also seeks to address current German public debates, invites distinguished guests and arranges cultural excursions. All fellows enjoy library privileges, IT and other services. Doctoral fellows will be enrolled at the FU Berlin during their fellowship.

The Berlin Program is a residential program based at the Freie Universität Berlin and administered in close cooperation with our North American partner and co-sponsor, the German Studies Association (GSA)—the largest professional association of scholars, professionals and students who focus on the study of German-speaking Europe (www.thegsa.org).
