Call for Applications: 2017 DAAD Visiting Junior Researchers

The BMW Center for German and European Studies at Georgetown University will host two DAAD-funded short-term research stays (6-10 weeks) for doctoral or postdoctoral students from German universities between April and December 2017. One position will be available in the spring/summer and one in the fall.

These research grants are open in terms of academic field. Priority will be given to applicants whose research connects to the work of the faculty at the Center (<http://cges.georgetown.edu/people/facultystaff/>).

Successful applicants will receive $1,575 to be used towards international travel and as an honorarium for a working paper on the researcher's topic. Depending on the length of stay, additional personal or home institutional funds may be required to meet minimum visa requirements in the United States.

Applications should be emailed to Christina Ruby at rbycm@georgetown.edu by March 31. These should include a cover letter that outlines the research project as well as the requested dates of stay, a CV, and one letter of recommendation. Applicants will be notified of the results by April 4, 2017. Additional applications may be accepted on a rolling basis. This grant is made possible by the generous support of the DAAD.

Feel free to address any questions to Professor Jeffrey Anderson, Director of the BMW Center, at jja5@georgetown.edu.
