

Studying at the UNAM was a great opportunity. The campus is very impressive, especially the iconic 'Islas' part. My classes provided perspectives I had not encountered before, in no small part because the UNAM engages with the world in a uniquely Latin-American way. Indeed, I had classes with experts in their field which were very engaging and enriching. Classes are 4 hours long and each require a term paper as evaluation. You are given the opportunity to take part in classes from two Masters' programmes, therefore you have the opportunity to take part in a wide range of classes. The UNAM has many opportunities for extracurricular activity. The gym and outdoor pool are free for students, there are free dance classes every day, and on Fridays there is an open-air market where students sell food, second hand clothing and home-made products. Overall, a very impactful learning and social experience.
